

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

Connolly, et al. v. Roche, et al.

2:14-cv-00024-JWS

LODGED: Proposed Defendants' Reply in Support of Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment Attached

1 Thomas C. Horne
2 Attorney General
3 Robert L. Ellman (AZ Bar No. 014410)
4 Solicitor General
5 Kathleen P. Sweeney (AZ Bar No. 011118)
6 Todd M. Allison (AZ Bar No. 026936)
7 Assistant Attorneys General
8 1275 W. Washington
9 Phoenix, Arizona 85007-2997
10 Telephone: (602) 542-3333
11 Fax: (602) 542-8308
12 kathleen.sweeney@azag.gov
13 todd.allison@azag.gov

14 Byron J. Babione (AZ Bar No. 024320)
15 James A. Campbell (AZ Bar No. 026737)
16 Kenneth J. Connelly (AZ Bar No. 025420)
17 J. Caleb Dalton (AZ Bar No. 030539)
18 Special Assistant Attorneys General
19 Alliance Defending Freedom
20 15100 N. 90th Street
21 Scottsdale, Arizona 85260
22 Telephone: (480) 444-0020
23 Fax: (480) 444-0028
24 bbabione@alliancedefendingfreedom.org
25 jcampbell@alliancedefendingfreedom.org
26 kconnelly@alliancedefendingfreedom.org
27 cdalton@alliancedefendingfreedom.org

28 Attorneys for Defendants

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

22 Joseph Connolly, et al.,
23 Plaintiffs,
24 v.
25 Chad Roche, in His Official Capacity as 26 Clerk of the Superior Court of Pinal
27 County, Arizona, et al.,
28 Defendants.

Case No: 2:14-cv-00024-JWS

DEFENDANTS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF CROSS-MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Table of Contents

1

2 Table of Authorities..... ii

3 Introduction 1

4 Argument..... 2

5 I. The Supreme Court’s Baker Decision Forecloses Plaintiffs’ Claims..... 2

6 II. The Fourteenth Amendment Does Not Forbid Arizona from Maintaining

7 its Man-Woman Marriage Definition..... 3

8 A. Rational-Basis Review Applies to Plaintiffs’ Claims..... 3

9 1. SmithKline Does Not Require Heightened Scrutiny..... 3

10 2. Plaintiffs’ Claims Do Not Implicate the Fundamental Right

11 to Marry..... 4

12 B. The Man-Woman Marriage Definition Satisfies Constitutional

13 Review..... 7

14 1. Plaintiffs’ Attempts to Defame the Purposes for Arizona’s

15 Man-Woman Marriage Definition Are Unavailing. 7

16 2. Arizona’s Man-Woman Marriage Definition Substantially

17 Furthers the State’s Compelling Interest in Connecting

18 Children to Both Their Biological Mother and Their

19 Biological Father..... 9

20 3. Arizona’s Man-Woman Marriage Definition Avoids the

21 Long-Term Adverse Consequences that the State Could

22 Logically Project Would Accompany the Redefinition of 23 Marriage. 12

24 4. The Challenged Marriage Laws Protect the People’s Right to

25 Define Marriage for Their Community..... 12

26 III. Plaintiffs Lack Standing to Raise Their Claim that Arizona Must

27 Recognize the Marriage Licenses that Other States Have Issued to Them..... 14

28 IV. If the Court Grants Plaintiffs’ Motion and Enjoins the State’s Man-Woman

Marriage Definition, the Court Should Stay Its Ruling Pending Appeal..... 16

Conclusion..... 18

Table of Authorities

Cases:

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

Baker v. Nelson,
409 U.S. 810 (1972) 2

Bishop v. Smith,
Nos. 14-5003 & 14-5006 (10th Cir. Jul. 18, 2014) 15

Board of Trustees of University of Alabama v. Garrett,
531 U.S. 356 (2001) 1

Bronson v. Swensen,
500 F.3d 1099 (10th Cir. 2007)..... 15

Coalition for Economic Equity v. Wilson,
122 F.3d 718 (9th Cir. 1997)..... 17

DaimlerChrysler Corp. v. Cuno,
547 U.S. 332 (2006) 14

District Attorney’s Office for Third Judicial District v. Osborne,
557 U.S. 52 (2009) 5

Foucha v. Louisiana,
504 U.S. 71 (1992) 4

Herbert v. Kitchen,
No. 13A687, 134 S. Ct. 893 (U.S. Jan. 6, 2014) (mem.) 16

Hertzberg v. Dignity Partners, Inc.,
191 F.3d 1076 (9th Cir. 1999)..... 8

Jett v. City of Tucson,
882 P.2d 426 (Ariz. 1994)..... 9

Johnson v. Robison,
415 U.S. 361 (1974) 1, 11

Kitchen v. Herbert,
No. 13-4178, 2014 WL 2868044 (10th Cir. June 25, 2014) 4

Loving v. Virginia,
388 U.S. 1 (1967) 5

Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife,
504 U.S. 555 (1992) 15, 16

1 Metro Broadcasting, Inc. v. FCC,
 2 497 U.S. 547 (1990) 10

3 Michael M. v. Superior Court,
 4 450 U.S. 464 (1981) 10, 11

5 Nguyen v. INS,
 6 533 U.S. 53 (2001) 10, 11

7 Price-Cornelison v. Brooks,
 8 524 F.3d 1103 (10th Cir. 2008)..... 4

9 Reynolds v. United States,
 10 98 U.S. 1456 (1878) 7

11 Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/American Express, Inc.,
 12 490 U.S. 477 (1989) 3

13 Rostker v. Goldberg,
 14 448 U.S. 1306 (1980) 17

15 Schuette v. BAMN,
 16 134 S. Ct. 1623 (2014) 12, 13, 14

17 Standhardt v. Superior Court,
 18 77 P.3d 451 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2003) 10

19 Tully v. Griffin, Inc.,
 20 429 U.S. 68 (1976) 2, 3

21 Turner v. Safley,
 22 482 U.S. 78 (1987) 5

23 United States v. O’Brien,
 24 391 U.S. 367 (1968) 8

25 United States v. Windsor,
 26 133 S. Ct. 2675 (2013) 6, 13

27 Valley Forge Christian College v. Americans United for Separation of Church &
State, Inc.,
 28 454 U.S. 464 (1982) 15, 16

Washington v. Glucksberg,
 521 U.S. 702 (1997) 5

Wright v. Lane County District Court,
 647 F.2d 940 (9th Cir. 1981)..... 2

1 Zablocki v. Redhail,
2 434 U.S. 374 (1978) 5, 7

3 Other Authorities:

4 Order, Latta v. Otter, No. 14-35420 (9th Cir. May 20, 2014), available at 5 <http://cdn.ca9.uscourts.gov/datastore/general/2014/05/20/14-35420a.pdf> 16, 17

6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

Introduction

1
2 Plaintiffs do not seek the freedom to pledge “vows to their . . . partner.” Pls. Resp.
3 at 1. They are already free to enter whatever private relationship they choose and to 4 publicly pledge their commitment to whomever they choose. What Plaintiffs seek is a 5 state-recognized marriage.

6 Yet in insisting that the State recognize their relationships as marriages, Plaintiffs 7 fail to acknowledge the State’s interest in regulating marriage. Plaintiffs focus instead on 8 their interest in “lov[ing] the person of their choosing.” Id. at 4. But the State has no 9 interest in whom its citizens choose to love. Rather, the State regulates marriage for the 10 primary purpose of channeling potentially procreative sexual relationships into enduring 11 unions for the sake of joining children to both their mother and their father. DSOF ¶¶ 1-12 4. But Plaintiffs’ relationships do not advance that compelling state interest.

13 No constitutional principle requires Arizona to recognize relationships that do not 14 implicate its overriding interest in marriage. “[W]here a group possesses distinguishing 15 characteristics relevant to interests the State has the authority to implement, a State’s 16 decision to act on the basis of those differences does not give rise to a constitutional 17 violation.” Bd. of Trs. of Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356, 366-67 (2001). Put 18 differently, the Fourteenth Amendment does not require the State to treat two groups the 19 same when “the inclusion of one group promotes a legitimate governmental purpose, and 20 the addition of [the] other group[] would not.” Johnson v. Robison, 415 U.S. 361, 383
21 (1974). The Constitution, therefore, does not mandate that the State redefine marriage to 22 include same-sex couples.

23 Throughout their arguments, Plaintiffs gloss over the important public-policy
24 determinations inherent in the State’s regulation of marriage and its definition. These 25 questions require a balancing of factors, competing interests, and sensitive policy
26 considerations, all of which impact a bedrock social institution of undeniable real-world
27 importance. For the rational and compelling reasons that Defendants have identified,
28 Arizonans have determined that man-woman marriage best serves their community. A

1 day may come when they see it differently—or perhaps it may not. But it is certain that a
2 ruling dismissing Plaintiffs’ claims would preserve that freedom to decide for the People.
3 In contrast, a decision striking down Arizona’s man-woman marriage definition would 4 permanently install a genderless-marriage institution. In that world, the People could 5 never recapture the man-woman marriage institution, regardless of what society’s best 6 interests might dictate. This Court should decline to bring about that result and should 7 instead leave these foundational domestic-relations questions where they belong—with 8 the People.

9 Argument

10 I. The Supreme Court’s Baker Decision Forecloses Plaintiffs’ Claims.

11 In Baker v. Nelson, 409 U.S. 810 (1972), the Supreme Court decided the precise
12 legal claims presented here: that neither the Due Process Clause nor the Equal Protection 13 Clause bars States from maintaining marriage as a man-woman union. See Defs. Mem. at 14 2. This decision remains “a controlling precedent, unless and until re-examined by [the 15 Supreme] Court.” Tully v. Griffin, Inc., 429 U.S. 68, 74 (1976).

16 Plaintiffs attempt to distinguish this binding precedent by arguing that different
17 facts are presented here because the Arizona Constitution explicitly defines marriage as a 18 man-woman union while the statutes at issue in Baker implicitly defined marriage that 19 way. Pls. Resp. at 3. But nothing suggests that the constitutional question decided by 20 Baker—that the Fourteenth Amendment does not forbid a State from maintaining man-
21 woman marriage—depended on whether the statute explicitly or implicitly defined
22 marriage as the union of man and woman. Moreover, the “precedential value of a 23 dismissal for want of a substantial federal question extends beyond the facts of the 24 particular case to all similar cases.” Wright v. Lane Cnty. Dist. Ct., 647 F.2d 940, 941
25 (9th Cir. 1981) (per curiam). Because Baker is undoubtedly “similar” to this case, its 26 “precedential value . . . extends” here. Id.

27 Plaintiffs also argue that “doctrinal developments” have undermined Baker’s
28 controlling force. Pls. Resp. at 3-4. But Defendants have already explained that “[i]f a

1 precedent of [the Supreme] Court has direct application in a case, yet appears to rest on 2 reasons rejected in some other line of decisions, the [lower court] should follow the case
3 which directly controls, leaving to [the Supreme] Court the prerogative of overruling its 4 own decisions.” Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc., 490 U.S. 477, 484
5 (1989). This principle applies equally to Supreme Court summary dispositions, which 6 remain “controlling precedent, unless and until re-examined by [the Supreme] Court.”
7 Tully, 429 U.S. at 74. Plaintiffs do not even attempt to address this point. Additionally,
8 not one of the doctrinal developments that Plaintiffs advance overrules Baker’s decision
9 on the merits. See Defs. Mem. at 3. Baker thus binds this Court.

10 II. The Fourteenth Amendment Does Not Forbid Arizona from Maintaining its 11 Man-Woman Marriage Definition.

12 Separate and apart from Baker’s binding force, Plaintiffs’ claims lack merit
13 because the Fourteenth Amendment does not forbid Arizona’s man-woman marriage 14 definition.

15 A. Rational-Basis Review Applies to Plaintiffs’ Claims.

16 1. SmithKline Does Not Require Heightened Scrutiny.

17 Defendants have articulated four reasons why SmithKline’s heightened scrutiny
18 standard does not apply here. See Defs. Mem. at 4-5. Plaintiffs have failed to respond to 19 any of those reasons. See Pls. Resp. at 5-6. Instead, Plaintiffs take on two strawmen that 20 scarcely resemble the arguments that Defendants presented.

21 Plaintiffs first contend that history and tradition cannot “immunize” a law from 22 “heightened review.” Id. at 5. But this mischaracterizes Defendants’ argument.
23 Defendants explained that the action challenged in SmithKline involved “intentional 24 discrimination” against gays and lesbians, whereas Arizona’s man-woman marriage
25 definition (which has been the law for more than a century) does not. Defs. Mem. at 4.
26 Indeed, Plaintiffs have not presented a “shred of evidence suggest[ing] that Arizonans 27 recognized man-woman marriage more than a hundred years ago for the purpose of 28 disadvantaging gays and lesbians.” Id. It is thus not history, but the absence of

1 intentional discrimination surrounding the origins of Arizona’s man-woman marriage
2 definition that immunizes the challenged marriage definition from heightened review.

3 Plaintiffs next assert that Arizona’s marriage definition “cannot be saved because 4 [it] also prohibit[s] bigamous and polygamous marriages.” Pls. Resp. at 6. Again, this 5 distorts Defendants’ position. Defendants contend that while SmithKline requires 6 heightened scrutiny when state action discriminates based on sexual orientation,
7 “Arizona’s man-woman definition of marriage does not.” Defs. Mem. at 4. “That 8 definition distinguishes between man-woman couples and all other relationships.” Id. “It 9 does not explicitly classify individuals based on their sexual orientation.” Id. Thus,
10 rational-basis review applies not “because [Arizona] also prohibit[s] bigamous and 11 polygamous marriages,” but because its man-woman marriage definition does not, as 12 SmithKline requires, discriminate based on sexual orientation.¹

13 2. Plaintiffs’ Claims Do Not Implicate the Fundamental Right to 14 Marry.

15 Defendants have established that Plaintiffs’ claims do not implicate the 16 fundamental right to marry. See Defs. Mem. at 7-9. In response, Plaintiffs claim that the 17 fundamental right to marry is not the right to enter the relationship of husband and wife,
18 but the “right . . . to marry the partner of one’s choosing.” Pls. Resp. at 8 (omitting 19 capitalization). Yet “[w]hatever the exact scope of [a] fundamental right . . . , it certainly 20 cannot be defined at [an] exceedingly great level of generality” as Plaintiffs have done.
21 Foucha v. Louisiana, 504 U.S. 71, 117-18 (1992) (Thomas, J., dissenting). Instead, it 22 must be defined consistent with what history has shown its objective meaning and 23 contours to be—as the right to enter the relationship of husband and wife.

24
25 ¹ Plaintiffs mistakenly assert that the Tenth Circuit recently held that strict scrutiny
26 applies to “sexual orientation classifications.” Pls. Resp. at 5 n.4. The decision that they 27 cite did not even address the standard of review that applies to sexual-orientation
28 classifications. Kitchen v. Herbert, No. 13-4178, 2014 WL 2868044, at *21 (10th Cir.
June 25, 2014). In fact, the Tenth Circuit has explicitly held the opposite of what Plaintiffs claim. See Price-Cornelison v. Brooks, 524 F.3d 1103, 1113 n.9 (10th Cir.
2008) (holding that rational-basis review applies to sexual-orientation-based classifications).

1 Plaintiffs apparently misunderstand Defendants' fundamental-right arguments.
2 Contrary to Plaintiffs' claims, see Pls. Resp. at 9-10, Defendants do not argue that the 3 fundamental right to marry applies only to couples who procreate. Rather, Defendants
4 argue that the Supreme Court's repeated references to procreation (both implicit and 5 explicit) when discussing the right to marry confirm that the Court understood the right
6 to marry as the right to enter into a gendered relationship (the only type of relationship
7 capable of producing children). See Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 12 (1967) (discussing
8 the link between marriage and "our very existence and survival"); Zablocki v. Redhail, 9 434 U.S. 374, 383-84 (1978) (same); id. at 384 (discussing "the right to marry, establish
10 a home and bring up children"); id. at 386 (discussing the plaintiff's "decision to marry
11 and raise the child in a traditional family setting"); Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 96 12 (1987) (discussing the link between marriage and "consummat[ion]" and the link 13 between marriage and the "legitimation of children").

14 Seeking to validate their refusal to define the right to marry with any specificity,
15 Plaintiffs claim that "the parameters of the Due Process Clause are intentionally ill-
16 defined." Pls. Resp. at 8. But the "ill-defined" parameters of the Due Process Clause do 17 not justify Plaintiffs in providing an amorphous description of the right that they assert.
18 On the contrary, it is precisely because the "'guideposts for responsible decisionmaking
19 in this unchartered area are scarce and open-ended'" that the Supreme Court has stressed
20 its "'reluctan[ce] to expand the concept of substantive due process,'" Dist. Attorney's 21 Office for Third Judicial Dist. v. Osborne, 557 U.S. 52, 72 (2009) (quoting Collins v.
22 Harker Heights, 503 U.S. 115, 125 (1992)), and has emphasized the need to provide a 23 "careful description" of the asserted liberty interest, Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S.
24 702, 720-21 (1997). The careful-description requirement ensures that the interest
25 asserted falls within an established fundamental right. Stated differently, that 26 requirement assists courts in discerning when a plaintiff seeks to cloak a novel right in 27 the garb of an established one. Yet Plaintiffs do not even try to carefully describe the 28 right that they present here.

1 Attempting to excuse their refusal to carefully describe the asserted right,
2 Plaintiffs argue that “Loving was no[t] . . . about the ‘right to interracial marriage,’”
3 “Turner was [not] about the ‘prisoner’s right to marry,’” and “Zablocki was [not] about 4 the ‘dead-beat dad’s right to marry.’” Pls. Resp. at 9. But this semantic exercise does not
5 advance their position. The right at issue in Loving, Turner, and Zablocki—no matter
6 how it was described—fell within the established right to marry, for all those cases
7 involved the joining of husband and wife. In other words, a careful description of the 8 right asserted in those cases would not have uncovered a novel right outside the 9 fundamental right to marry. Moreover, it is not surprising that the Supreme Court did not 10 discuss the careful-description requirement in Loving, Turner, and Zablocki because it
11 did not announce that requirement until it decided Glucksberg, which was years after it 12 ruled in those right-to-marry cases.

13 Plaintiffs’ proffered “right to marry the person of one’s choosing,” if enshrined in 14 case law, would subject every well-established restriction on marriage—such as 15 consanguinity, numerical, and age restrictions—to strict scrutiny.² That outcome,
16 however, conflicts with Supreme Court precedent in at least three ways.

17 First, in United States v. Windsor, 133 S. Ct. 2675, 2691-92 (2013), the Supreme 18 Court affirmed that States have the right to adopt their chosen definition of marriage, 19 identifying “[t]he definition of marriage [as] the foundation of the State’s broader 20 authority to regulate the subject of domestic relations.” Id. at 2691. But all marriage 21 definitions necessarily preclude some couples or groups from marrying. Thus, because 22 Plaintiffs’ fundamental-right arguments would subject all definitions of marriage to strict 23

24
25 ² Plaintiffs’ discussion of Turner illustrates this. See Pls. Resp. at 9-10. Plaintiffs claim
26 that their desire to “express[] . . . emotional support,” convey “spiritual significance,” 27 and access “government benefits” “support[s]” their fundamental-right argument. Id. at 28 10. But the same could be said about relationships between closely related individuals, relationships involving more than two people, and relationships involving minors.
Following Plaintiffs’ logic, then, individuals in all of those relationships would likewise have a fundamental right to marry the person or persons of their choosing.

1 scrutiny, they would render illusory Windsor's affirmation of States' rights to define
2 marriage. Such a result cannot be reconciled with Windsor.

3 Second, in Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 166 (1878), the Supreme Court
4 upheld the constitutionality of laws banning polygamous marriages. Id. (“[I]t is within 5 the legitimate scope of the power of every civil government to determine whether 6 polygamy or monogamy shall be the law of social life under its dominion.”). Yet
7 Plaintiffs' view of the fundamental right to marry would require that those laws satisfy
8 strict scrutiny. That, of course, would render their constitutionality immediately suspect.

9 Third, in Zablocki, the Supreme Court observed that “[b]y reaffirming the 10 fundamental character of the right to marry, [it did] not mean to suggest that every state
11 regulation which relates in any way to the . . . prerequisites for marriage must be 12 subjected to rigorous scrutiny.” 434 U.S. at 386 (emphasis added). But Plaintiffs'
13 arguments would surely have the impermissible effect of subjecting to strict scrutiny all 14 consanguinity-related, numerical, and age prerequisites for marriage.

15 For these reasons, Plaintiffs' claims do not implicate the fundamental right to 16 marry, and rational-basis review applies.

17 B. The Man-Woman Marriage Definition Satisfies Constitutional Review.

18 Defendants have demonstrated that Arizona's man-woman marriage definition
19 satisfies both rational-basis review and heightened scrutiny because it is substantially 20 related to three compelling government interests. See Defs. Mem. at 9-21. Plaintiffs'
21 counterarguments have failed to undermine Defendants' position.

22 1. Plaintiffs' Attempts to Defame the Purposes for Arizona's Man- 23 Woman Marriage Definition Are Unavailing.

24 Plaintiffs baselessly assert that the challenged marriage laws were motivated by 25 “fear,” “prejudice,” and “disapproval,” Pls. Resp. at 6, and that such alleged motivations
26 automatically invalidate the State's man-woman marriage definition, id. Aside from the 27 absence of support for this audacious charge concerning the motives underlying the 28 challenged laws, Plaintiffs' argument suffers from an obvious flaw: Arizona's man-

1 woman marriage definition existed for nearly a century before the challenged laws were 2 enacted; therefore, even if the State had not approved any of those enactments, marriage
3 in Arizona would nevertheless have been (and continue to be) a man-woman union. See
4 DSOF ¶¶ 5-6. Thus, Plaintiffs’ focus on defaming the legislators and voters who enacted
5 laws in 1980, 1996, and 2008 misses the mark. Simply put, the constitutionality of 6 Arizona’s man-woman marriage definition cannot be determined by fixating on the 7 motives of the individuals who approved those laws.

8 Additionally, Plaintiffs’ attacks on the legislators’ and the electorate’s motivations
9 are groundless. Plaintiffs seek to discern improper motives for S.B. 1038’s enactment (in 10 1996) from a handful of statements, most of which were made by a few members of the 11 public (rather than by the legislators who supported the bill). See PSOF ¶¶ 35-43; Defs.
12 Controverting Statement of Facts ¶¶ 36-39. Even the one statement that a legislator
13 purportedly made is supported only by an advocacy paper’s secondhand account. See
14 PSOF ¶ 34; Defs. Controverting Statement of Facts ¶ 34. That, however, provides no
15 basis for impugning the motives of the more than seventy legislators who approved S.B.
16 1038. See United States v. O’Brien, 391 U.S. 367, 384 (1968) (“What motivates one 17 legislator to [speak] about a statute is not necessarily what motivates scores of others to 18 enact it, and the stakes are sufficiently high . . . to eschew guesswork.”); Hertzberg v.
19 Dignity Partners, Inc., 191 F.3d 1076, 1082 (9th Cir. 1999) (noting that the Ninth Circuit 20 does not “rel[y] on . . . stray comments by individuals” “when considering legislative 21 history”); Fact Sheet for S.B. 1038, Arizona State Senate, at 2 (Pls. Ex. 23) (indicating 22 that more than seventy legislators voted for S.B. 1038).

23 In discerning the motives for the Marriage Amendment (in 2008), Plaintiffs 24 ignore the stated purposes of those who supported and approved the Amendment. See
25 DSOF ¶¶ 28-31. Instead, as Plaintiffs’ Response to Defendants’ Statement of Facts
26 makes clear, Plaintiffs rely on the views of individuals who opposed and thus voted 27 against the Amendment. See Pls. Resp. to DSOF ¶¶ 29-31. Yet what is relevant is not the 28 views of those who opposed the Amendment, but the intent of those who voted for it. See

1 Jett v. City of Tucson, 882 P.2d 426, 430 (Ariz. 1994) (“Our primary purpose is to 2 effectuate the intent of those who framed the provision and, in the case of an
3 amendment, the intent of the electorate that adopted it.” (emphasis added)). That intent,
4 as the Amendment’s supporters articulated it, is to (1) connect children to both their 5 biological mother and their biological father, (2) avoid the adverse consequences likely 6 to accompany the redefinition of marriage, and (3) protect the People’s fundamental 7 right to define marriage for their community. See DSOF ¶¶ 29-31. The alternative
8 motives that Plaintiffs suggest lack evidentiary support.

9 2. Arizona’s Man-Woman Marriage Definition Substantially
10 Furtheres the State’s Compelling Interest in Connecting 11 Children to Both Their Biological Mother and Their Biological 12 Father.

12 Plaintiffs do not deny that the State has a “compelling interest in connecting 13 children to both their biological mother and their biological father.” Defs. Mem. at 10
14 (omitting capitalization). Nor do they dispute that the State has a compelling interest in 15 protecting children’s legal and intangible interests in knowing and being raised by both 16 of their biological parents. Id. at 12. They have thus conceded these points.

17 Plaintiffs contest only the fit between the State’s man-woman marriage definition 18 and its interest in connecting children to both their biological mother and their biological 19 father. See Pls. Resp. at 10-11. But their arguments do not undermine the substantial 20 relationship that exists between the end pursued and the means chosen. Only man-
21 woman couples are capable of furthering the State’s interest in linking children to both of 22 their biological parents; the vast majority of married man-woman couples produce their 23 own biological children, DSOF ¶ 39; and marriage generally makes those relationships
24 more stable and enduring, DSOF ¶ 40. In contrast, same-sex couples can never provide a 25 child with both her biological mother and her biological father.³ Therefore, a substantial 26 relationship between the ends pursued and the means chosen exists here—where the

27 _____
28 ³ When a same-sex couple takes steps to create a child, they must involve at least one person of the opposite sex, and that involved third party will be a biological parent of the created child.

1 State has drawn a line between, on the one hand, a group that is uniquely capable of 2 furthering (and that in the vast majority of instances does in fact further) the State’s 3 interest and, on the other hand, groups that categorically do not further that interest.

4 Attempting to refute this, Plaintiffs argue that Arizona’s man-woman marriage
5 definition is underinclusive because it permits marriage between man-woman couples
6 who consider themselves “infertile” or “who simply do not wish to ever procreate.” Pls.
7 Resp. at 11.⁴ But many of those man-woman couples will directly further the State’s 8 interest in connecting children to both their biological mother and their biological father.
9 For instance, many man-woman couples who do not plan to have children may 10 experience unintended pregnancies or may simply change their minds. See Standhardt v.
11 Superior Court, 77 P.3d 451, 462 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2003); DSOF ¶ 41 (“Unintended 12 pregnancies account for nearly half of total births . . . in the United States”). And some 13 man-woman couples who believe that they are infertile might find out otherwise due to 14 the medical difficulty of determining fertility, or they might remedy their infertility
15 through modern medical advances. See Standhardt, 77 P.3d at 462. Thus, including man-16 woman couples who consider themselves infertile or who do not presently plan to 17 procreate still furthers the State’s interest in linking children to both of their biological 18 parents.

19 The close fit between Arizona’s man-woman marriage definition and the goal of 20 connecting children to their mother and their father satisfies heightened review. The 21 Supreme Court has recognized that even under heightened scrutiny, the fit need not be 22 perfect: it is not necessary that the law “under consideration . . . be capable of achieving 23 its ultimate objective in every instance,” Nguyen v. INS, 533 U.S. 53, 70 (2001), so long 24 as “in the aggregate” it advances the underlying objective. Metro Broad., Inc. v. FCC, 25 497 U.S. 547, 579, 582-83 (1990); see also Michael M. v. Superior Court, 450 U.S. 464,

26
27 ⁴ This argument is foundationally flawed because it assumes that the State can inquire 28 into a couple’s procreative intentions or mandate premarital fertility testing, but the State cannot take any of those steps without impinging upon constitutionally protected privacy rights.

1 475 (1981) (plurality opinion) (rejecting as “ludicrous” the argument that a law
2 criminalizing statutory rape for the purposes of preventing teenage pregnancies was 3 “impermissibly overbroad because it makes unlawful sexual intercourse with 4 prepubescent females, who are, by definition, incapable of becoming pregnant”). As 5 explained above, the man-woman definition of marriage advances the State’s interest in 6 the vast majority of cases, and that easily satisfies heightened review.

7 Moreover, the State cannot redefine marriage as Plaintiffs demand without 8 communicating messages about marriage that are directly at odds with the interests that 9 the State is trying to advance. See Defs. Mem. at 16-19. In particular, redefining 10 marriage to include any two people sends the message that there is nothing inherently 11 valuable about a child being raised by her biological mother and biological father. See id.
12 at 17. Conveying this message, however, undermines a primary goal that the State seeks 13 to accomplish through its marriage laws. This confirms that the State’s chosen definition
14 of marriage is narrowly tailored to its interest in promoting biological homes.⁵

15 Finally, Plaintiffs argue that “society’s ‘child-centered’ interests . . . compel 16 allowing same-sex couples to marry so that their children . . . receive [its] benefit[s].”
17 Pls. Resp. at 11. This argument commits an error that the Supreme Court has expressly 18 denounced: “it states too broadly the [government’s asserted] objective.” Johnson, 415
19 U.S. at 377. The State’s asserted interest is not in generically advancing child-centered 20 interests, but in connecting children to both their biological mother and their biological 21 father. See Defs. Mem. at 10. It is undeniable that same-sex couples, as a class, do not 22

23 ⁵ Defendants need not show that eliminating the biologically based distinction between 24 man-woman couples and same-sex couples at issue in this case would harm the State’s 25 interest in connecting children to both of their biological parents. This is true even under 26 heightened scrutiny. For example, in Nguyen and Michael M., both of which are cited
27 above, the Supreme Court upheld biologically based classifications under heightened 28 scrutiny without requiring the government to show that harm to its interest would result from adopting the legal change sought in those cases. Likewise, here, Defendants need not show harm to the State’s interest in connecting children to their biological mother and biological father. Nevertheless, Defendants have shown that the State could logically project that redefining marriage would hinder its ability to further that interest.

1 advance that interest. The Fourteenth Amendment thus does not compel the State to 2 include them in marriage.

3 3. Arizona’s Man-Woman Marriage Definition Avoids the Long-
4 Term Adverse Consequences that the State Could Logically
5 Project Would Accompany the Redefinition of Marriage.

6 Defendants have shown that the State may logically project that redefining
7 marriage poses a significant risk of bringing about adverse social consequences over 8 time. Defs. Mem at 15-19. Plaintiffs do not deny that “[e]ven under heightened scrutiny, 9 ‘courts must accord substantial deference to the [State’s] predictive judgments.’” Defs.
10 Mem. at 15 (quoting Turner Broad. Sys., Inc. v. FCC, 520 U.S. 180, 195 (1997)). Neither 11 have Plaintiffs contested the fact that “legally redefining marriage as a genderless
12 institution will have real-world consequences.” Id. Nor do Plaintiffs dispute that the State 13 has a compelling interest in promoting marriage among man-woman couples who have 14 or raise children, encouraging fathers to raise their children jointly with their children’s 15 mothers, and avoiding marital instability. See id. at 16-19.

16 Instead, Plaintiffs baldly assert—without any explanation—that “none” of the 17 projected adverse results that Defendants have identified “have any logical connection to 18 same-sex marriage.” Pls. Resp. at 7. Although Plaintiffs cite some district-court 19 decisions, those decisions did not follow the Supreme Court’s recent example of 20 “assum[ing]” the voters’ reasonable concerns about “potential” “adverse results.”
21 Schuette v. BAMN, 134 S. Ct. 1623, 1638 (2014). The unrefuted logic of Defendants’
22 arguments, combined with the evidence that Defendants have produced, affirms the 23 State’s concerns regarding the projected effects of redefining marriage. See Defs Mem.
24 at 15-19; DSOF ¶¶ 44-53. Plaintiffs’ bald assertion, unaccompanied by analysis, does not 25 even begin to undermine the real concerns that Defendants have identified.

26 4. The Challenged Marriage Laws Protect the People’s Right to 27 Define Marriage for Their Community.

28 Defendants have shown that the challenged marriage laws substantially further the State’s compelling interest in protecting the electorate’s right to define marriage. See

1 Defs. Mem. at 19-21. Plaintiffs, in response, try to sweep away Windsor's affirmation of 2 States' rights to define marriage by emphasizing that "any regulation [of marriage] must 3 . . . respect fundamental rights." Pls. Resp. at 12 (citing Windsor, 133 S. Ct. at 2691-92).
4 They similarly dismiss Schuette because that case does not "permit voters to deny 5 fundamental rights." Pls. Resp. at 13. This focus on fundamental rights is beside the 6 point, for Defendants have already established that Plaintiffs' claims do not implicate the 7 fundamental right to marry. See Defs. Mem. at 7-9; supra at 4-7. In their prior briefing, 8 Defendants have emphasized that "the State's interest in protecting the People's 9 collective right to democratically decide this vital social question [concerning the 10 definition of marriage] . . . amply sustains the challenged laws" "[b]ecause Plaintiffs'
11 claims do not implicate their [fundamental] right[]" to marry. Defs. Mem. at 19-20.

12 Plaintiffs also suggest that Windsor establishes the merits of their claims because 13 the Court there "explicitly held that DOMA deprived same sex couples of Due Process."
14 Pls. Resp. at 12. This ignores the fact that Windsor expressly confined its "holding" and 15 "opinion" to the federal government's decision not to recognize "same-sex marriages
16 made lawful by the State." 133 S. Ct. at 2695-96; see also id. at 2696 (Roberts, C.J., 17 dissenting) ("The Court does not have before it, and the logic of its opinion does not 18 decide, the distinct question whether the States . . . may continue to utilize the traditional 19 definition of marriage."). Windsor also emphasized that "[t]he State's power in defining 20 the marital relation [wa]s of central relevance in th[at] case." Id. at 2692 (emphasis
21 added). There, the federal government interfered with that power. Here, Arizonans
22 properly exercised it. Windsor thus does not condemn Arizona's marriage laws.⁶

23 Plaintiffs argue that Schuette involved "a state's policy choice to repeal an 24 optional remedial measure." Pls. Resp. at 11-12. But the plaintiffs in Schuette argued

25
26 ⁶ Plaintiffs additionally assert that in his Windsor dissent, Justice Scalia "lament[ed] that 27 Windsor compelled lower courts to strike down state marriage . . . laws." Pls. Resp. at 28 12. On the contrary, Justice Scalia stated that "when the issue . . . is state denial of marital status to same-sex couples," "[s]tate and lower federal courts should take the Court at its word and distinguish away" the Windsor ruling. Windsor, 133 S. Ct. at 2709 (Scalia, J. dissenting) (emphasis added).

1 that the remedial measures at issue (affirmative-action programs) were effectively
2 mandatory because the voters could not repeal them. By rejecting the plaintiffs’
3 arguments, the Supreme Court’s Schuette decision established that those remedial
4 measures were optional—well within the vast public-policy domain open to reasonable
5 democratic discourse and legislation. For Plaintiffs to argue that Schuette involved the 6 repeal of an optional law is simply to describe the effect of the Supreme Court’s
7 decision. In the same way, Plaintiffs here seek to judicially override Arizonans’ reasoned
8 decision not to take the optional step of redefining marriage to include relationships
9 other than man-woman couples.

10 Plaintiffs also rely on the fact that the Schuette Court left “undisturbed the settled
11 rule that state policies based on suspect classifications involving race trigger heightened 12 scrutiny.” Pls. Resp. at 13 (emphasis added); see also id. (discussing “injury . . . inflicted 13 on racial minorities”). This case, however, does not involve race, so Schuette’s
14 unremarkable race-based observation does not advance Plaintiffs’ legal position.

15 III. Plaintiffs Lack Standing to Raise Their Claim that Arizona Must Recognize 16 the Marriage Licenses that Other States Have Issued to Them.

17 Defendants have demonstrated that Plaintiffs who obtained marriage licenses
18 from other States lack standing to raise their marriage-recognition claim. See Defs. Mem.
19 at 21. This is fatal to Plaintiffs’ ability to present their recognition claim because litigants
20 must “demonstrate standing for each claim [they] seek[] to press.” DaimlerChrysler
21 Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332, 352 (2006) (emphasis added).⁷

22 Defendants have established that for purposes of Plaintiffs’ recognition claim, 23 they cannot satisfy the causation or redressability requirements of standing because they 24 have not sued a public official who recognizes out-of-state marriages. See Def. Mem. at

25 _____
26 ⁷ Plaintiffs misunderstand the claim-specific nature of Defendants’ standing argument.
27 See Pls. Resp. at 14-16. Defendants argue that Plaintiffs who have obtained marriage 28 licenses from other States lack standing to raise their recognition claim. Defendants do not claim that Plaintiffs—whether those who obtained a marriage license from another State or those who seek a marriage license in Arizona—lack standing to challenge their inability, as same-sex couples, to receive marriage licenses from Defendants.

1 21.⁸ Plaintiffs first seek to remedy their error by asserting a new injury—the inability to 2 convert a noncovenant marriage into a covenant marriage. See Pls. Resp. at 14-15. But
3 they did not allege this injury in their Amended Complaint or otherwise challenge
4 Arizona’s covenant-marriage laws. Hence, that purported injury is not before the Court,
5 and Plaintiffs cannot use it to remedy their standing deficiencies. See Bishop v. Smith,
6 Nos. 14-5003 & 14-5006, at 39-40 (10th Cir. Jul. 18, 2014) (concluding that the 7 plaintiffs could not remedy their inability to satisfy the redressability prong of standing
8 by “rely[ing] upon a different injury” not alleged in their pleadings).

9 Plaintiffs also claim that “the required ‘causal connection’” exists “because their 10 injuries are ‘directly related’ to the [challenged] [m]arriage . . . [l]aws.” Pls. Resp. at 15.
11 But the causal connection must run “between the [asserted] injury and . . . the challenged
12 action of the defendant[s].” Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560-61 (1992)
13 (emphasis added). This argument thus misses the mark.

14 In attempting to refute Defendants’ reliance on Bronson v. Swensen, 500 F.3d
15 1099, 1110 (10th Cir. 2007), Plaintiffs fail to see the import of that decision. Defendants 16 cite Bronson’s discussion of the causation requirement of standing. See Defs. Mem. at 17 21. Plaintiffs, however, seek to distinguish Bronson’s injury-in-fact analysis, see Pls.
18 Resp. at 14 n.6, which Defendants do not rely on and which is not at issue here. Hence, 19 Plaintiffs have not meaningfully distinguished Bronson.

20 Plaintiffs additionally argue that they “have standing by necessity because . . .
21 there is no state official charged with ‘recognizing’ Plaintiffs’ marriages.” Pls. Resp. at 22 15. This argument fails for at least two reasons. First, just as “[t]he assumption that if 23 [plaintiffs] have no standing to sue, no one would have standing, is not a reason to find 24 standing,” Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Ams. United for Separation of Church &
25 State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 489 (1982) (internal quotation marks omitted), Plaintiffs’
26 assumption that they would not have standing to raise their recognition claims against 27

28 ⁸ Plaintiffs inaccurately assert (see Pls. Resp. at 14) that Defendants have challenged only the causation requirement of standing.

1 any other public official is not a reason to find standing. It is inappropriate “to assume
2 that [proper defendants] are nonexistent simply because [Plaintiffs have not named them]
3 in their suit.” Id. Second, Plaintiffs wrongly assume that there are no public officials who 4 recognize out-of-state marriages. Many state officials (not including the Governor or the 5 Attorney General) recognize marriages—both in State and out of State—when they 6 confer various rights or enforce duties. That Plaintiffs did not name any of them as 7 defendants does not mean that they do not exist. It is Plaintiffs’ burden to find and 8 identify them. See Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561 (stating that plaintiffs “bear[] the burden of 9 establishing” standing). Yet they have not done so.

10 IV. If the Court Grants Plaintiffs’ Motion and Enjoins the State’s Man-Woman
11 Marriage Definition, the Court Should Stay Its Ruling Pending Appeal.

12 Plaintiffs argue that if the Court rules in their favor, it should decline to stay its 13 ruling. Doing as Plaintiffs suggest would create needless legal uncertainty and confusion
14 pending appellate court (including Supreme Court) review of the important constitutional 15 questions raised in this case.

16 Plaintiffs do not even attempt to distinguish the nearly identical cases where the 17 Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit required district courts to stay their rulings pending
18 the exhaustion of all appeals. See Herbert v. Kitchen, No. 13A687, 134 S. Ct. 893 (U.S.
19 Jan. 6, 2014) (mem.) (ordering that the “[p]ermanent injunction issued by the [district
20 court]” is “stayed pending final disposition of the appeal”); Order, Latta v. Otter, No. 14-
21 35420 (9th Cir. May 20, 2014), available at [http://cdn.ca9.uscourts.gov/datastore/
22 general/2014/05/20/14-35420a.pdf](http://cdn.ca9.uscourts.gov/datastore/general/2014/05/20/14-35420a.pdf) (granting the defendants’ “motions to stay the district 23 court’s . . . order pending appeal”). As Judge Hurwitz wrote when concurring in the 24 Ninth Circuit’s decision to stay the Idaho federal district court’s injunction in Latta, “the 25 Supreme Court, in Herbert v. Kitchen, 134 S. Ct. 893 (2014), has virtually instructed 26 courts of appeals to grant stays in the circumstances before us today.” Id. at 3. In other 27 words, Judge Hurwitz noted, the Supreme Court’s stay in Herbert “provides a clear
28 message”—“that district court injunctions against the application of laws forbidding

1 same-sex unions should be stayed . . . pending court of appeals review.” Id. at 5. Binding
2 precedent thus requires a stay of any decision enjoining enforcement of Arizona’s man-
3 woman marriage definition.

4 In addition, Defendants satisfy the requirements for a stay. First, the arguments in 5 Defendants’ Memorandum of Law and this Reply establish that Defendants are likely to 6 succeed on the merits. Second, while Plaintiffs assert that “Defendants did not explain
7 how allowing some same-sex couples to marry (pending appellate review) would cause
8 any harm,” Pls. Resp. at 17, Plaintiffs overlook the fact that as a matter of law in the 9 Ninth Circuit “a state suffers irreparable injury whenever an enactment of its people or 10 their representatives is enjoined.” Coal. for Econ. Equity v. Wilson, 122 F.3d 718, 719
11 (9th Cir. 1997). Third, the balance of equities and public interest weigh in favor of a stay.
12 If Defendants begin issuing marriage licenses in violation of state law before the 13 Supreme Court ultimately settles whether States may maintain man-woman marriage, the 14 State, same-sex couples, and many third parties (such as businesses and employers) will 15 experience unnecessary confusion, uncertainty, and conflict. See Defs. Mem. at 23. The 16 harm to the State includes not only the inability to enforce its marriage laws, but also the 17 burden of revising (and re-revising) forms, policies, and rules. The harm to same-sex
18 couples and other third parties includes possessing Arizona marriage licenses of doubtful 19 legal validity and making important decisions in reliance on legal unions whose 20 legitimacy is questionable. Additionally, the modest delay in Plaintiffs’ obtaining the 21 marriage licenses that they seek—an inconvenience that does not constitute a cognizable
22 injury unless Plaintiffs eventually prevail on the merits of their claims—does not come 23 close to offsetting the immediate and certain irreparable injury that the State would 24 experience upon the enjoining of its laws. Coal. for Econ. Equity, 122 F.3d at 719; see 25 also Rostker v. Goldberg, 448 U.S. 1306, 1310 (1980) (reasoning that the inconvenience 26 of forcing the plaintiffs to register for the draft while their constitutional challenge was 27 finally resolved did not “outweigh[] the gravity of the harm” to the government “should 28 the stay requested be refused”). The balance of the harms and the public interest thus

1 dictate that the Court should stay any ruling in Plaintiffs' favor pending the exhaustion of 2 all appeals.

3 Conclusion

4 For the foregoing reasons, Defendants request that the Court grant summary
5 judgment in their favor and dismiss all claims in Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint.

6 Alternatively, if the Court grants summary judgment in Plaintiffs' favor, Defendants
7 request that the Court stay its judgment pending appeal.

8
9 Dated: July 21, 2014

10 s/ Byron J. Babione

11 Byron J. Babione

12 James A. Campbell

13 Kenneth J. Connelly

14 J. Caleb Dalton

Special Assistant Attorneys General

15 Thomas C. Horne

Attorney General

16 Robert L. Ellman

17 Solicitor General

18 Kathleen P. Sweeney

19 Todd M. Allison

Assistant Attorneys General

20
21 Attorneys for Defendants

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that I electronically transmitted the attached document to the Clerk's Office using the CM/ECF System for filing and service of a Notice of Electronic Filing to the following recipients on this 21st day of July, 2014.

Shawn K. Aiken
Heather A. Macre
William H. Knight
Stephanie McCoy Loquvam
2390 East Camelback Road, Suite 400
Phoenix, AZ 85016
ska@ashrlaw.com
ham@ashrlaw.com
whk@ashrlaw.com
sml@ashrlaw.com

Mark Dillon
Dillon Law Office
P.O. Box 97517
Phoenix, AZ 85060
dillionlaw97517@gmail.com

Herb Ely
3200 North Central Avenue, Suite 1930
Phoenix, AZ 85012
herbely@eburlaw.com

Mikkel Steen Jordahl
Mikkel (Mik) Jordahl P.C.
114 North San Francisco, Suite 206
Flagstaff, AZ 86001
mikkeljordahl@yahoo.com

Ryan J. Stevens
Griffen & Stevens Law Firm, PLLC
609 North Humphreys Street
Flagstaff, AZ 86001
stevens@flagstaff-lawyer.com

Dated: July 21, 2014

s/ Byron J. Babione
Byron J. Babione